Some Other Very Queer Freaks of a Funny Old Family in Urbana, Ohio.

ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.1 URBANA, O., January 22 .- In a fine twostory brick in this city resides the most peculiar family in the State. Their name is Glenn. There are two sisters and one brother left. Seventy-five years ago John Glenn, of Scotch-Irish descent, moved from Kentucky to sparsely settled Urbana. His European ancestors had left him money. This he invested in real estate, and to-day the property of the Glenns is one of the most valuable in Champaign county.

Old John died without a will, leaving three sons and two daughters. The extensive farms and city lots were owned in common. He was much disappointed when it was all over, and said it was one of the worst things that ever happened. It looked to him as though the liquor interest had been abandoned by its friends. Mr. Eberhart thought it rather hard that the proposition to de-stroy the property of the liquor men should not be met by another to compensate them for the destruction.

"The country," he said, "has prospered while liquor has been sold. If it hadn't it would be different. We have," he continued, "paid $50,000 a year to the United States Government to carry on our business in Allegheny county, and we have paid about $5,000 yearly to the county. I don't think an institution that does that ought to be wiped out without a thought of the injury done and the disarrangement of business it will cause. But what can we do? If this thing goes through with no provision for compensation, and the people carry it, we see staring us in the face the decision of the United States Supreme Court that we have no redress in law."

Mr. Wherry, of Cumberland, representing the Democrats who had pledged themselves to their constituents for reasons peculiar to their localities to vote for submission, explained his position and opposed action by the caucus that would bind the members. Many were pledged to vote against submission and some were pledged to vote for it. These gentlemen felt their duty to be to their own people first and to the caucus afterward, and he thought under the circumstances a resolution binding the memunpledged, both on this point and on the subject of a general special election. A significant speech made during the caucus was that of Mr. Roper, of Lehigh, who de-clared that the Democratic party must not put itself forward as the special champion of the liquor interest, which had never helped the Democratic party. He declared that if the party had nad the aid of the liquor men in the last campaign Chauncey Black, instead of General Beaver, would now be seated in the Gubernatorial chair. He believed the party ought to oppose the prohi-

The caucus was closed with a hot sho from Mr. Weber, of Lycoming, who had made several warm speeches while others were putting themselves on record. Mr. Weber told his fellow Democrats that whether against submission or whether they woted for it they had permitted them-selves to be forced into that position by the Republicans. He asserted and he didn't care who knew it, that the only independent policy for the Democrats was to abstain from voting either way.

Mr. White was absent in Philadelphia, and consequently did not vote. GENERAL SPORTING NEWS OF THE DAY

The great topic of conversation among local baseball patrons yesterday was, of course, the reported collapse of the Indianapolis club. Opinions were considerably divided as to what the object of the stockholders of the club is. The two leading opinions are to the effect that the club has become an absolute financial wreck, and that it is a move to freeze out a number of undesired small stockholders and get clear of a certain amount of indebtedness. During a conversation on the matter, President Nimick "Indianapolis will not quit. There will be a club in that city again this year, and, while baseball matters may look a little gloomy there now, it will all come out right in plenty of time for the Hoosier team to take the field when the League championship season opens. In other words," continued President Nimick, "I think the capitalists of the Indianapolis club have become tired of putting up their money for the nefit of the army of stockholders, a majority of whom own but one share each and will do nothing to help the club along. Just as soon as the Brush crowd obtain the stock you may Look for encouraging baseball news from Indianapolis. Mr. Brush is a good, live business man, and he takes a great interest in the club. He also realizes that a League club is a capital advertisement for any city, and he won't abandon the club if it is possible to carry it along.

The Pittsburg club was in precisely the same condition when we first took it. Four of us said we would pay off all the indebtedness and put a good team in the field if the stockholders uld turn their stock over to us, which they

MANAGER PHILLIPS' OPINION. Manager Phillips holds a similar opinion, and thinks all will come right. Al Pratt said: There may be something serious in the action of the Indianapolis club; that is the stockholders may have been forced to break up their organization. If this is a fact I don't think that the result will be as serious to the National League as many people imagine.

The League will be able to get another club, I think, and even if that cannot be done it is possible to get along with seven clubs. The American Association once continued with only five clubs. But if that would not be satisfactory the League, will get along all right with factory the League will get along all right with There was still another opinion prevailing, and this was to the effect that the collapse of Indianapolis has been expected by the League magnates, and, therefore, provision has been made for the breakdown. This provision, it is made for the creatown. This brovision, it is claimed, is that Cincinnati will be ready to jump in and fill the vacancy when called upon. So far Cincinnati has signed none of its old players, and this fact apparently gives rise to the opinion just quoted above. There is, how-ever, nothing tangible to support it.

THE BOOSIERS MAY KEEP IT. After considering the matter in all its bear thorities," it does seem likely that the Indiandifficult matter to organize another association to purchase the franchise. Of course it is true that the franchise has been tendered to President Young, but it is easy to understand how ments may have been made to have the arrangements may have been made to have the franchise returned under certain conditions to any new company that may be formed. It is also understood that even this arrangement cannot be carried out except by a meeting of the League directors.

It is true that Indianapolis has not been doing much hustling so far this winter, and this fact recounts the notion; that the collarse doing much hustling so far this winter, and this fact prompts the notion that the collapse had been made in good faith; but on the other hand it may be stated that there would be no desire to "hustle" for new and good players until the financial difficulties were tided over. It is a fact well understood that Imilianapolis is not a profitable baseball town, and whether or not the club will be reorganized for next season it seems safe to say that it will not be in the League next year. It is not a League city. Eastern authorities express the opinion that Eastern authorities express the opinion that it is doomed now, and that the collapse means the disbandment of the club. It will however take time to prove whether or not this opinion is true. At any rate, no matter how we look at the case, it is a very unpleasant occurrence for the League. It may be that it will hasten a consolidation of all the big and profitable cities

TRY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH 1 LONDON, January 22.-The Tory knight, who owns the offending Sheffield newspaper, sent an abject apology to Sir Charles Russell, who, in consequence, to the great relief of the commissioners, did not press for punishment, and after a little speech from President Hannen, in the course of which he hinted the belief that journalists are not possessed of ordinary human feelings, the court settled down to business. Patrick Farragher, formerly a clerk in the Land League Offices at Dublin, swore that Egan and other League officials were in frequent communication with the members of the Invincible conspiracy, and that money occasionally passed. The witness told of the spiriting away of the League books at the time the organization was suppressed, and of other matters which have been common gossip in Dublin for years past. The Times' counsel made the most of their witness, whom they evidently regarded as of the greatest value, but his evidence, when analyzed and sifted, did not amount to much, and in cross-examination it became almost purely negative. Farragher's personal character, like most of the Times witnesses, would not bear the test of cross-examination.

Farragher deposed that Archbishop Walsh, in Mr. Davitt's presence, had advised him not to pay his rent, and that he (Farragher) was evicted. He was after-ward employed in the offices of the Dublin branch of the League. Witness also testi-fied that he had carried letters, some of $16.000, it is calculated that the profits next year ought to amount to at least $20,000.

The receipts in 1888 were $57,000, and that, too, in the face of all the political excitement here which diverted attention from baseball, and caused a much smaller attendance than which contained checks, from Mr. Patrick Egan to Mullett, the Invincible. Farra-gher further testified that Mr. Arthur O'Connor, member of Parliament for East Donegal, held an important post in the League. Messrs. Davitt, Sexton and Harrington were members of the executive. Witness lodged with Weldon, who had been tried for the murder of young Castlereagh. Weldon afterward went to Manchester, having a check for his expenses which was drawn on the Hibernian bank. Nally used and caused a much smaller attendance than usual at the games that were played after midsummer. Dickson and Taibott, proprietors of the three theaters in Indianapolis, have opened negotiations for the purchase of the club, having telegraphed to President Young as follows:

"Is the tranchise of the Indianapolis club for sale, and what will buy it? We will purchase it if we can get it at a reasonable figure, and will agree to run the club here."

They propose to purchase the club solely as a business venture, and if they secure it they think they will get better work out of the men than has been done heretofore. to visit the League rooms. Sir Charles Russell protested against the introduction of this evidence. He stated that Nally was undergoing a sentence, and that he objected to an inquiry being made into the circumstances of Nally's crime in order to damage members of the House of Commons, who, it was alleged, associated with him. The members of the court con-ferred and decided that the evidence con-cerning Nally was admissible. Farragher continued his testimony. He said he had seen Mr. Parnell and Sexton attend meet-

He is Making It Lively for Everybody-The Opposition Slinging Mud. PARIS, January 22.—Boulangerists are showing great energy all along the line. Propositions were made from $18,000 down, but Syracuse and Rochester threatened to quit if any high figure was adopted, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that Syracuse was persuaded to agree to any change.

Royalists are still divided on the question of abstaining from voting. The squabbles of the Gen-eral's domestic life, his debts and intrigues are also detailed. The Boulangerists spond by harping upon the charge that the Government is employing the secret service fund in the interest of M. Jacques. Meanand they can only be transferred to some other club with the approval of the League. There will, of course, be a lively scramble for nearly all of the members of the Hoosier team, es-pecially Denny, Glasscock, Hines, Boyle, Myers and Bassett. It is possible that the League will defer all action regarding the dis-posal of these players until it can be deter-mined what club is to succeed Indianapolis. To-day the calculators gave Boulanger 215,-000 votes against: 170,000, and odds were laid against the Republican candidate. The influence of the members of the Municipal Council, who are almost unanimously against Boulanger, is the leading factor in making his success doubtful. WISSMANN'S APRICAN ADVENTURE.

Wined Before Leaving Berlin. BERLIN, January 22 .- The Emin Relief Committee meet to-morrow to finally decide upon a plan for the expedition. The route through the Vitu territory proposed by Captain Wissmann is regarded as the best, as the expedition, by proceeding along the left bank of the Tana, which forms the northern boundary of the British sphere of influence, avoids encroaching upon British territory. A section of the committee, holding that the expedition has English sympathy if not English help to support it, favors starting from Hombosa, whence it was intended to dispatch British relief for Wadelai. Probably the committee will decide to leave the ultimate selection of the route to the leaders after reaching Zanzibar. To Certain Documents That Implicate

Royalty in the Morier Scandal. BERLIN, January 22,-The dark allusion of the Cologne Gazette to certain documents in the Geffeken case, which the paper say were not published because political and dynastic interests might suffer, refers to letters written by Morier while at Darmstadt in which Princess Alice and several English royalties are involved. According to statements current in the official circle, if Prince Bismarck is forced by political exigencies to publish these letters, they will prove that Frederick and his wife were indiscreet and divulged the plans of Prussia, and that even before the opening of the campaign of 1870 Darmstadt was the focus of intrigues against the unification of Germany. The documents that are withheld may afford ample justification of Bismarck's accusations against Frederick in his report to the present Emperor, but the strength of the public feeling against further scandal has become so extreme that the semi-official press has received hints to cease discussing the sub-

The North German Gazette reprints the statement published in the Cologne Gazette that Count Solms-Sennerwaldes, German Minister to Madrid, confirms the report of Major Von Deines on the Morier affair, and the comments of the Russian press on the incident. It is now stated that Sir Robert Morier is only once mentioned in the Geffeken documents. This mention occurs in a letter from Baron von Roggenbach to Prof. Geffeken, which contains the words:

'Morier will arrive here to-morrow.' The republication of the foregoing is the notice taken of the Morier incident by an official paper. It is coupled with a state-ment calculated to modify the Cologne Gazette's allegations regarding Prof. Geffcken.
